Paradise Construction was the New York City Housing Authority's General Contractor for a $2.4-million maintenance/rehabilitation of Gowanus Houses Units I, II, III, V, X and XII. The six low-rise (4- and 6-story) apartment buildings are part of a 14-unit residential complex planned by NYCHA in the late 1940s to serve the burgeoning African-American and minority population of Brooklyn's Boerum Hill neighborhood and completed in 1949.

The project included extensive repairs to the buildings' parapet walls, roofing replacement and asbestos management
